WEST VIRGINIA

West Virginia has four distinct seasons with a range of temperature and rainfall that affect its varied terrain in many ways. Outdoor recreation enthusiasts can enjoy every season in West Virginia from spring fishing to summer whitewater rafting to fall hikes and winter snow sports. Spring bursts onto the scene with the pastel hues of redbud and dogwood and the down home taste of ramps at festivals in the mountains. Summer is lush and green with cool mountain streams for fishing and warm sunny days for boating on the lakes and rivers. Fall is brilliant; cool, crisp mornings and sunny afternoons filled with the vivid reds, golds and greens of deciduous trees, and the opportunity to dig for ginseng from September 1 – November 30. Winter brings snow for skiing, sledding and cross-country hikes.
